O Allah, send prayers and peace upon our master Muhammad, who was of beautiful form, handsome and well-proportioned, fair in complexion with a touch of redness, and whose face was like the sun and the moon. When compelled to mention matters considered indecent, he would refer to them indirectly. He carefully guarded his tongue, speaking only about what concerned him. When he remained silent, dignity rested upon him, and when he spoke, he was elevated and adorned with radiance.

His speech was clear and distinct, neither scant nor excessive, such that whoever sat with him would retain it and all who heard it would understand it, as though it were beads strung together, with no excess and no deficiency. If one were to count his words, he would be able to enumerate them. He did not speak ill of anyone, nor criticise them, nor seek out their faults. 19. O Allah, send prayers and peace upon our master Muhammad, whose gathering was a gathering of forbearance, modesty, trustworthiness, and patience. In it, voices were not raised, nor were sanctities dishonoured. When he spoke, those sitting with him would lower their heads in stillness, as though birds were perched upon them. When he fell silent, they would speak, and they did not dispute in his presence. Whoever began speaking was heard until he had finished, and the same courtesy was shown to each speaker. If he spoke, they would listen attentively to him, and if he commanded, they hastened to carry out his command. He would smile at what they smiled at and marvel at what they found remarkable.

Whoever sat with him or spoke with him regarding a need, he would remain patient with him until that person was the one to leave. 32. O Allah, send prayers and peace upon our master Muhammad, the first to intercede and the first whose intercession will be accepted, the master of the children of Adam on the Day of Judgement. There will be no prophet on that Day, from Adam and those after him, except that he will be under his banner. Indeed, You are Praiseworthy, Glorious.
