3. O our master, O Messenger of Allah, you are the intended purpose of existence, and you are the master of every parent and every child. You are the peerless gem around which the various classes of created things revolve, and you are the light whose radiance filled the earths and the heavens. Your blessings cannot be counted, and your miracles are not limited by number so as to be exhaustively enumerated. The stones and the trees sent salutations upon you, the silent animals spoke before you, water gushed and flowed from between your two fingers, the trunk longed for you at your departure, and the salty well became sweet by the spittle from between your lips.
